

WAIT, IS THIS SAFE?

COVID-19 is unlikely to be passed on through prepared meals ordered for take-out or delivery.

Since COVID-19 is spread mainly through person-to-person contact, the best precaution to take is to avoid direct contact with service workers.

If you are still concerned, here are some other practical steps you can take to stay safe when ordering take-out or food delivery.

8 SAFETY TIPS:

- 1 Practice appropriate social distancing with restaurant personnel or other customers when getting take-out at the restaurant.
- 2 Use touch-free payment systems, including touch-free tipping.
- 3 Place delivery bags and containers in the sink rather than on the table or countertop.
- 4 Transfer food from takeout containers to a plate.
- 5 Discard all delivery bags, boxes, and takeout containers in the trash or recycling.
- 6 Wash your hands before eating.
- 7 Leftovers should be put in your own food storage containers rather than in takeout containers.
- 8 Clean and sanitize the sink after your meal.
